POETRY AND SENSIBILITY

A sensible envelop announces its architecture.

A tower, tall and proud, whose primary structure sways to the rigor of its orthogonality, its technical reason for being alive. A second skin is then placed upon this rigid framework. A light, almost living skin, composed not of lines, but of circles and soft shapes.

This skin is a mesh, a veil perforated with circular openings. These circles are not monotonous: they vary. Here a large oculus, there a multitude of tiny pores. As if the wind had flung drops of water of different sizes against the facade, leaving perfect imprints.
The square grid beneath remains. It is the foundation of this continuous melody. It reassures, it structures, it supports.
The round skin above is the breather. It dances upon the grid without negating it, creating an effect of depth and vibration.
With this new skin, softness is invited. Right angles soften under the gaze. The light that passes through these round openings no longer enters in the same way: it diffracts, tracing discs of light on the interior floors, and as evening falls, it escapes through these same circles like fireflies (*) in the night.

The tower becomes a filtered mysterious object. From far, we perceive a soft texture, up close, we discover the dialogue between the rigor of the plot and the freedom of the rings - circle.

Dominique Desmet, Architect, February24th, 2026

Poésie et Sensibilité

Une enveloppe annonce son architecture.
Une tour, haute et fière, dont la structure primaire obéit à la rigueur de son orthogonalité, sa raison d'être technique. Sur cette ossature rigide vient se poser une seconde peau. Une peau légère, presque vivante, constituée non pas de lignes, mais de ronds et de formes douces.

Cette peau, est une résille, un voile perforé d'ouvertures circulaires. Ces ronds ne sont pas monotones : ils varient. Ici un large oculus, là une multitude de petits pores. Comme si le vent avait projeté des gouttes d'eau de tailles différentes contre la façade, y laissant des empreintes parfaites.
La trame carrée, en dessous, reste présente. Elle est le fond de cette mélodie continue. Elle rassure, elle structure, elle porte.
La peau ronde, par-dessus, est la respiration. Elle danse sur la trame sans la nier, créant un effet de profondeur et de vibration.
Avec cette nouvelle peau, la douceur s'invite. Les angles droits s'adoucissent sous le regard. La lumière qui traverse ces ouvertures rondes n'entre plus de la même manière : elle se diffracte, dessine des disques de clarté sur les sols intérieurs, et le soir venue, elle s'échappe par ces mêmes cercles comme des lucioles dans la nuit.

La tour devient un objet poétique et envoutant. De loin, on perçoit une texture douce. De près, on découvre le dialogue entre la rigueur de la trame et la liberté du cercle.

Dominique Desmet, Architecte, 24 février 2026.
